

The people of Australia vote the Government in that they believe will work for all citizens, not just the corporate banks that take peoples money and refuse to disclose what exactly they do with it.

I being a disabled pensioner cannot afford to lose what little money I have in savings by the bank gambling with it.

So as a person that voted in good faith I have become vey disillusioned with how this Government has been treating the very people that put them in power.

This proposed bail in is as far as I am concerned is a criminal offence and I strongly believe we should have a separate banking system in place for those of us that do not wish our savings be used in this way but to be protected from such activities . The past Governments failed to plan for the baby boomers and now we are suffering enough because of their lack of foresight without having to be ripped off the little we have worked so hard for by the very banks we had trust in.

The people of Australia have the right to feel safe that their bank deposits will be there when they need them, unlike the pensioners that lost all their superannuation because of banks bad management and stock picks.
