

The "to big to fail" - Why should we have to prop up banks that are gambling in investment derivatives at a rate never seen.

The trading banking should be separated from the investment banking.

Bail in, bailout or so called ring fencing wont fix the problem. The big four are above $24 trillion into derivatives which have nothing to back them?

The only way to separate true banking and investment banking is a system which America had in place until the banking sector had removed over time.

GLASS STEAGLL Act 1933 to 1999 which worked well for the people of the country, not the banks.
